Pitcher Stephens, Unalded, Failed... Worked Heroically, But Could Not Weather the Storm-The Score.

(HICAGO, ILL., July 12.-Special.-It is ead, but true, that the University of Virginia Base-Ball Club dropped out of the college tournament to-day by suffering defeat from Yale. By the rules two defeats bars a club, and the struggle for the World's Fair championship flid the elegant Spaulding cup has dwindled down to Yale and Amherst. Yale has lost one game, while Amheret has a clear 'ccord. If they win to-morrow it will close the tournament; if not another game will be played Saturday.

Through keing the cup the Southerners will fare better from a financial point of view than any other club. They are paid railroad fare to and from Chicago and is per day for each man in the team as long as they remained in the tourna-ment. The boys have been here over two weeks, and have spent most of their spare time at the World's Fair or other sure resorts. Most of them expe leave for home before the last of this

Their great weakness was lack of pitchers, and this was only too clearly demonstrated yesterday and to-day. Stephens did heroic work in the opening games, but could not keep up the pace. Yale realized this to-day, when, ins of putting Carter in the box as intended, they with well-timed confidence held him back for the final struggle, as they believed and which proved true, with Amherst.

Hume appeared on the field for the first time, and one inning was enough for him. Stephens pitched the remainder of the Rame. The Southerners put up a slower game than usual, and Yale took advan-tage of it. Murphy was given a base on balls in the first inning, stole second and scored on Norton's single. Norton counted on Bowers' triple, and Bowers was sent in by Parson's three-bagger. In the second Reddington was given a In the second Academics to second by base on balls; was sacrified to second by Kedste, and scored on Murphy's hit. The latter was sacrificed to third by Norton, and went home on Bowers' single. Another run was made in the fifth by Bowers, who singled, and was sacrificed home by Parsons and Graves. Abbott's fumble in the sixth let Carter to first, ddington's single sent him to second, McGuire's misplay advanced the runner a base and both romped in on Murphy's Rhett rapped the sphere for two bases the third and scored on Worthington's single. Virginia's second run was counted Nelson in the fourth. He was given first on balls, stole second and crossed the plate on Stone's single. McGuire made a sensational running catch of a hot liner in the eighth and doubled Kedste on In the ninth Lander, Norton and Carfer executed a pretty double play, the ictims of which were Marshall and Stephens. The score: VIRGINIANS.

Their Opponents—Other Games. CLEVELAND, O., July 12.—Gaffney gave a poor exhibition of umpiring this afternoon. In the third inning, with three runs in for Cleveland, two men on bases and no one out, he permitted a double play to be made on a foul ball. Nash knew the ball was foul and did not start to make the play until Merritt yelled to him to do so. In the next inning Te-beau stopped a hit in fair ground, re-tired the batter and then Gaffney called it foul. The crowd was so disgusted that it left the grounds and the game was turned into a farce. Tucker spiked Zimmer and hurt him so that he left game. The attendance was 2,000.

PHITSBURG, July 12.—Pittsburg took the final game from New York to-day in a close and exciting contest. It was a pitcher's battle, in which Killen proved to be more fortunate than Rusle, as the latter was caught napping in the first two innings, and was hit hard enough to give Pittsburg a victory. After that the local people could not touch him. Killen weakened perceptibly. New York finishing weakened perceptibly. New York finishing strong with the two runs and having a man left on third. ST. LOUIS, MO., July 12.—The Phillies deserved to-day's game for their magnificent playing. It was theirs by gift of Umpire McQuaid. His decisions gave them two scores in the second inning. The Browns n ade a splendid rally in the rinth and tied the score. They would have made two more runs but for foolish base running by Dowd and Quinn.

MORE THAN EXCURSIONISTS.

Mr. George Freeman, Jr., and Miss Mary Rowe Married in Washington. FREDERICKSBURG, VA., July 12.-

Special.-A happier, better humored crowd never left Fredericksburg than the large excursion party which went to Widewater on the Potomac yesterday. The excursion was given under the auspices of the Brown Memorial Society of the Presbyterian church and was liberally patronized. The six or seven hundred composing the party were mostly children, and young people, with a good sprinkling of other persons. In such a gathering there were, of course, many romantic couples, but no one suspected that the occasion would furnish a sensation. Among the excursionists, however, were Mr. George Freeman, Jr., and Miss Mary Rowe, both of this city. They have been lovers for some time, but the parents of the young lady were opposed to the match. Yesterday these young people took matters in their own hands, and when the regular passenger train bound for Washington steamed into the station never left Fredericksburg than the large when the regular passenger train bound for Washington steamed into the station at Widewater about 2 o'clock in the afternoon, they boarded it, and in less than two hours were in the Capital city. PICTURESQUE CEDAR PARK.

A Lovely But Neglected Pleasure Space of the Annexed District

Outlined against a background of sky, what looks like a small skeleton temple now salutes the eye from a bare hilltop just north of Mott Haven. The perch of this simple but conspicuous building is part of the rocky backbone of the annexed district. It has steadily withstood the climbing city for these many years, is pierced in few places, and ocuples between thirty or forty acres of this ridge, and sundry high pastures, peopled with cattle and traversed here ie between the park and the site of the The bare hilltop thus crowned in Grecian manner is part of the half-forgotten Cedar Park, and the new temple is an evidence that the growth of population about this neglected pleasure place seems at length to justify the improvement of the park. The city obtained title to Cedar Park some years since, and it is down upon the books of the park department, but the ground is much as it must have to the parks of New York leave this o out of account, while many maps ignor its existence. Cedar Park contains seven teen and one-half acres, and lies between One-hundred-and-fifty-second and One-hundred-and-fifty-se huadred-and-fifty eighth streets, and Walton avenues. The last-named so that the boundary upon the west is imperfectly defined, and the most inter-esting natural curiosity thereabouts, a nblance of a gigantic bench, may northern end of Cedar Park is adorned with a fast decaying frame cottage looking out with many gables upon a shaded lawn, and a tangled garden sown thick with rulnous pavillons that seem to sug-gest in the former occupant a taste for open-air trysting places and moonlight meetings. When house and grounds and garden were in their prime the owner possessed a truly charming spot, for Cedar Park, almost from end to end, is the Park, almost from end to end, is the highest ground short of the bluffs about High Bridge, and from almost any spot in the park one may overlook the greater part of the annexed district, miles of the Harlem, and a large area of Manhattan Island. The wind-swept new pavillon stands upon the very pinnacle of the hill, looks straight down Mott avenue to the south, and to the westward commands every inch of that new viaduct from Washington Heights, one of these days to vie with the city's three great mands every inch of that new values from Washington Heights, one of these days to vie with the city's three great bridges as an object of interest alike to residents and visitors.

Cedar Park received its name from its hundred or more cedars, some picturesquely gnaried, but none of sreat value for shade. Except for these the park has few trees save those that surround the rulnous cottage at the northern end of the grounds. But the park has natural advantages that promise to make it in time one of the most picturesque of the city's pleasure places. Not even the heights of Claremont Park command so fine a view on all sides as that visible from this bare pasture, and already the natural disposal of the shrubbery gives inints that show what a landscape gardener might do with the ground. Mornminis that show what a landscape gardener might do with the ground. Morningside Park alone is more picturesquely precipitous than Cedar Park. Not a single half acre of the park is level, and the only level space large enough for a tennis court lies about the sattage. But tennis court lies about the cottage. But the knolls and slopes are charming and great rocks jut out picturesquely in every part.

The new pavillon is the first step toward improving the park. The place is unfenced and it has no paths save those fascinating trails that run bare and smooth throughout the whole suburban region, record, written large, of a busy people's goings and comings. These run in long lines the whole length of the park, converging at the southern end, where a bridge carries Mott avenue over the Central's railway cut. A keeper where a bringe carries shot avenue book the Central's railway cut. A keeper looks after the park, and the residents of the region make it a picule ground. On Sundays crowds visit the place. The paviiton is to be for the use of piculekers and for a band stand. It will be an airy spot in spite of its unshaded condition for the height catches whatever breez may be going. Workmen are now blast-ing a trench through the rocky ribs of the height in order that the pavilion may be provided with Croton water, and fre quenters of Cedar Park are hoping fo other improvements. Cedar Park is the nearest pleasure ground for some thousands of people living about Mott Haven, and northward to the point where it bees more convenient to visit Claren Park. The nearest rallway station, Met-rose, on the Harlem, is about ten min-utes' walk from the northern extremity of Cedar Park, and Mott Haven station is about twice as far from the southern extremity. Cedar Park is part of the great manor Cedar Park is part of the great manor once in the possession of the Morris family. The park was sold by one of the descendants to the city, and about the same time adjoining land on the southwest was sold to the Astors. Much of the latter has been filled in and build add along the Harlem, and where the seper of Cedar Park dug clams efficient or twenty years ago now extend the firm wharves of the Astors.—New York Sun. ABSOLUTELY PURE

THAD STEVENS' IRON MINES.

Believed for Forty Years to Be Extremely Rich, They Prove Worthless.

Harrisburg (Pa.) dispatch in the New York Sun of July 9th says: Many years ago Thaddeus Stevens purchased a large tract of land on the South Mountain, in Adams county, which was be-lieved to be extremely rich in iron ore. He erected furnaces on the truct, and the Caledonia furnaces obtained a wide reputation. Mr. Stevens invested large sums of money in the plant, and when the Rebels invaded Pennsylvania in 1863 one of the first things they did was to burn Stevens' furnaces to the ground and do all the destruction they could to the rest of the property, such was the Southern hatred of the unrelenting Abolitionist leader and anti-Southern statesman. Stevens was then a resident of Lancaster, and when he was asked how much damage the Reteis had done him at Caledonia, he replied: "Damage? Why they haven't left me a thing. Everything is gone but the debts."

Mr. Stevens never rehabilitated his pos-sessions at Caledonia, but the popular impression of the great richness of the territory in Iron ore remained. After Mr. Stevens died capitalists tried to purchase the property, but his estate was encum-bered in so many complications, owing to the peculiar terms of his will, that the sale could not be effected until the estate was settled. That required more than twenty years. Then the Caledonia Mining and Matufacturing Company puring and Marufacturing Company pur-chased the property, spent several hun-dred thousand dollars in building a railread from Crocochergue Island to Cale-donia to haul the iron ore to market, and then turnelled into the hill more than 500 feet to strike the rich beds of To the surprise of the company they found scarcely any ore to reward them for all their labor and outlay, and now, after having made several drifts and shafts in other parts of the tract, and finding no ore to speak of, they have chandoned their mines and closed their railroad. The venture cost more than $1,000,000, and, as it was entered into without any speculative idea whatever, but as a legitimate business enterprise, the result is one of the greatest surprises in the in lustrial history of the State

France Wants Forage and Ment.

Writing of the evils of the long drought in France, our Paris correspondent says: If America could send forage rapidly over to this country, she would find a splendid market for it. The pastoral districts of France are threatened with the extinction of their flocks and herds. Cattle are being sold for what they will fetch. The Paris market at Vilette has a plethoric supply. This very abnormal situation was the subject of a long debate in the Chamber this afternoon, when a question was addressed to the Minister of Agriculture respecting the scarcity of Agriculture respecting the scarcity of fodder by M. Ducoudray. M. Viger said that something could be done in the way of obtaining a large supply of tinned meat for the army, and it was decided that a proposition to this effect should be brought forward on Saturday.— London Daily News
